Helpful Communication Tool

By Lisa Renee

This is a resource that's helpful for understanding different types of personalities and what drives and motivates them. Many businesses and organizations use this as a tool to help foster a better work environment. We were able to use this with our military squadron (not just for military members but husbands and wives too). Several families in our squadron studied this together and we found it helpful. People are motivated by different things: freedom, structure, relationships, independence/the ability to be uniquely creative. We had a lot of fun with this study. It helped us understand others better and wasn't just about what motivates them but how to reach people in a way that is meaningful to them. This wasn't just an individual study. We had several families that worked on this together and we all found it helpful. In addition to a better understanding of different perspectives, we all had some good laughs together too. We highly recommend it for anyone individually or as an organization or larger group as well.
